

COOKIES ON OUR WEBSITE

We use cookies on our website. Please see below for more information.

What are cookies?

A cookie is a small text file that requests being saved on your computer. There are two types of cookies, temporary and permanent. Temporary cookies (aka session cookies) are temporarily stored in your computer's memory and are removed when you turn off your browser. The temporary cookies we use are deleted after the visit, and we do not map your activity using these cookies. The permanent cookies we use are stored on your computer for one year.

If you want more information about cookies and the Electronic Communication Act, which regulates the use of cookies, you can visit website: <https://erhvervsstyrelsen.dk/cookie-loven-0>

Cookies on our website - purpose and use

Here we describe the kinds of cookies we use, the purpose for which they are used, the information that is collected through the use of cookies and whether they are stored permanently or temporarily. If you want to affect our use of cookies, you can do this through your browser, read more below under 'avoid cookies'.

The information we receive about activity when you or others visit our website is collectively stored and cannot be linked, either directly or indirectly to any individual. We do not store any personal information about you through our use of cookies.

For analysis and development of the website and maintaining functionality

We use temporary cookies in order to be able to analyse how the website is used so that it can be improved. Cookies provide information such as how many people visit the various pages on our website, how long our visitors remain on our website, which parts of the website are used, the type of device used, which page our visitors were previously on and which country you and other visitors are surfing from.

The cookies we use for these purposes are not strictly necessary for the website to function; we thus need to obtain your permission for us to use cookies when you visit our website. Use of our website means that you give us permission to place temporary cookies on your computer.

For website functionality

We use cookies to maintain the website's functionality and keep track of your session. These cookies are necessary for the portal's functionality and we therefore do not require your permission to use these cookies.

To know if you have accepted cookies

In order to know if you have accepted cookies which require your permission, we use a permanent cookie which is stored in your browser for one year. This cookie is necessary for the website's functionality and we therefore do not require your permission to use these cookie.

Cookies on our website - third party

Certain information collected using cookies on our website is used, in addition to ourselves, by Google, providing the Google Analytics web service. Here you can read more about how Google uses cookies and how you can avoid them.

Avoid cookies

If you do not want to accept cookies, your browser may be set up to refuse storage of cookies automatically or to provide information every time a website requests storage of a cookie. Through your browser, you can also check which cookies have been saved and delete them. See your browser's help pages for more information.

Without the cookies we characterised as necessary in the description above, you will be unable to use all parts of our website. You can block the other cookies but if you choose to do so it may mean that the website will not function optimally. A further consequence of your avoiding cookies is that we obtain poorer background information for following up website use and poorer opportunities for making improvements.

Blocking cookies means that you will be asked again if you accept cookies next time you use our website.

Questions?

If you have any questions, please contact gdpr@axesslogistics.com.